D. Equity, diversity, and inclusion (EDI)

Project incorporates the perspectives of end-users and other stakeholders, particularly groups facing barriers, in the design and execution of the project, presents practices grounded in EDI principles, and shows potential to further EDI.

Reviewer overall recommendation

Considering the proposal as a whole, do you think FSC should fund this project as a worthwhile contribution to the skills ecosystem?

Overall Recommendation:

- I recommend this project for funding
- I recommend this project for funding conditional on changes and/or more information
- I do not recommend this project for funding

Explain your reasoning for this recommendation.

This project is well suited to FSC priorities as well as the particular funding call. Developing tools (digital) that showcase competencies and abilities is extremely useful to employers, and also serve the interests of equity, diversity and inclusion for the accessible nature of those tools. The result of this project will make it easier for people to show what they can do beyond credentials and "Canadian experience." Given the way the labour market mismatch is characterized in the proposal (as a problem with "supply and demand"), a reliance on demonstrated competencies is a more reliable "currency" or "cue" to help get a better match between worker to job (rather than resumes or word of mouth -- very inefficient means of matching supply and demand). However -- and appropriately so -- it does not do away completely with certification as it has a micro-credentialing component as well.

What do you think are the strongest aspects of this project?

What is most interesting is the use of meta data such as employment and job categories, the built-in assessment tool (of pre-existing capacity) and the capacity to assess for the awarding of a micro-credential. It combines elements of a PLAR regime, an employment counselling function and a curriculum provider all in one, with employer buy-in (which is essential).

Where do you think the project has gaps or challenges?

The challenges identified as a lack of industry lead is a typical one when it comes to "finding out what the labour market needs" so industry engagement does require extra attention in terms of making this project work (e.g., industry needs to understand and accept the legitimacy of the certification/credential awarded). Other challenges related to micro-credentialism would also be applicable; they are not often quality controlled and mean little beyond their immediate area of relevance (e.g., they are not often joined up with broader credential frameworks).
