D. Equity, diversity, and inclusion (EDI)

Project incorporates the perspectives of end-users and other stakeholders, particularly groups facing barriers, in the design and execution of the project, presents practices grounded in EDI principles, and shows potential to further EDI.

Reviewer overall recommendation

Considering the proposal as a whole, do you think FSC should fund this project as a worthwhile contribution to the skills ecosystem?

Overall Recommendation:

- I recommend this project for funding
- I recommend this project for funding conditional on changes and/or more information
- I do not recommend this project for funding

Explain your reasoning for this recommendation.

This proposed project holds a lot of promise for direct impact along with learning about new training models, specifically with Indigenous Women. This is a proponent that should receive continued support from FSC. That said, this proposal fails to communicate some concrete items. The number of participants in the current program and the proposed program is completely missing. To assess value for money we need to understand the number of participants, the completion rate, and eventual employment rate.

The proposal suggests both replicating the current project to another site along with broadening the scope of the model and training to other sectors and different audiences. I strongly suggest focusing this project on replicating the model with the exact same audience and to support the same sector. In terms of learning, if we could demonstrate this is an effective training model for Indigenous Women, the investment would be worth it. Accordingly, the project team's ambitions should be re-focused on this one objective. With the goal to prove replicability and scale.

There is a lack of clarity on the learning methodology to actually measure project success. Aside from some qualitative statements, there is nothing to actually convince the reviewer of the project's current success. Demonstrating the project team's track record on the current project is important to justify continued investment. I could not determine that. This should be investigated.

What do you think are the strongest aspects of this project?

The current project in the IT space supporting Indigenous Women to get trained and find employment is rather compelling. The proposed project and replicating it in another site would be useful. The learning model for participants sounds good, but there is a lack of detail to really understand it.

Strong industry partners in the IT space. Nothing concrete in other sectors though to give confidence in the broadening of the sector learning scope.

Where do you think the project has gaps or challenges?

Trying to broaden the scope too far. The proposal suggests both replicating the current project to another site along with broadening the scope of the model and training to other sectors and different audiences. This would be a major challenge and dilute the learning potential from the core model. Taking on a new sector and creating useful learning content in this time period would likely stretch the project team too thin.

The learning plan and evaluation plan is poorly explained.

Comments

There is $200,000 for computers and IT for the site they are already running programming. This seems odd.
